

PRIMARY HEALTH CARE NURSES day

Wednesday,
7 February 2024

The first Wednesday in February each year is Primary Health Care Nurses Day, where we celebrate the amazing work that nurses do outside of the hospital setting, in aged care, community, general practice, custodial, schools and a range of other primary health care settings.

Primary Health Care Nurses Day is our chance to shed light on the incredible work being done by the 96,000 primary health care nurses nationwide and highlight the vital work that they do that positively impacts the health and wellbeing of every Australian.

Wear primary colours on Primary Health Care Nurses Day

On Primary Health Care Nurses Day, join the vibrant celebration by 'wearing primary colours.' Embrace the power of red, blue, and yellow on Wednesday 7 February 2024 to symbolise gratitude for all primary health care nurses and the important work that they do in proactive wellbeing and keeping Australians out of hospitals.

To celebrate Primary Health Care Nurses Day, we are:

Scan to learn more

